CFW PROMOS

DATE: AUGUST 11 2026

The gym has emptied out.

Lena Wilde sits on a large equipment case near the training area, still in her workout clothes. Her hair is damp, a towel beside her. She looks tired from training, but comfortable.

LENA: "I had a friend... my best friend... tell me something recently that I didn't really want to hear."

She smiles slightly.

LENA: "She said sometimes it sounds like I'm addicted to being the underdog."

Lena thinks about it for a moment.

LENA: "And... yeah. Maybe."

A small shrug.

LENA: "It's easy for me. Somebody doubts me, I get to prove them wrong. Somebody thinks I'm too small, I get to show them I'm not. I've been doing that my whole career."

She pauses.

LENA: "But then I looked at this match and realized... who exactly am I supposed to be the underdog to?"

LENA WILDE

There's no attitude behind the question. She genuinely considers it.

LENA: "We've done this before."

A pause.

LENA: "CFW's first women's gauntlet. I won it."

Lena nods slowly.

LENA: "Wasn't pretty. Wasn't exactly a night I walked away from feeling great about everything that happened, either."

Her expression briefly changes. She doesn't need to say Sudio's name.

LENA: "But I won."

She looks back up.

LENA: "So maybe this time I stop pretending I'm surprised to be here."

LENA: "And look at this match. There are women who've helped build CFW. There's someone stepping into a CFW ring for the first time. There's someone we don't even know yet."

She shrugs.

LENA: "It's a tough field."

A small smile.

LENA: "But I've been here before. I've won this match before. And I'm tougher now than I was then."

Lena looks directly into the camera.

LENA: "So no. I'm not the underdog."

A moment.

LENA: "I'm the favorite."
